Hi professor,

How's it going? As you may know, I am near the completion of my undergraduate studies in Computer Science at Caldwell University. I've been planning to further my academic journey as we talked about the other day. I intend to pursue a PhD in Computer Science, focusing on AI and computer vision, at Rutgers University. I'm reaching out to request your support through a letter of recommendation.

I'm grateful for all of your help, guidance and mentorship throughout my time at Caldwell. It has been incredibly impactful in shaping my academic and research pursuits. The experiences and knowledge I've gained under your guidance is probably the highlight of my studies at CU, especially in my AI research endeavors. A recommendation from you would offer Rutgers would definitely be valuable insights into my academic capabilities and potential for advanced research. I hope it will also reflect the high-quality mentorship and educational standards at Caldwell University.

I'm more than willing to provide any additional information you might need for the letter like academic transcripts, or specifics about the Rutgers program. If there are any concerns or if you need further discussion on this, please feel free to let me know. I'm planning to submit my application by January 1st, and I completely understand if this request comes during a busy period for you.

Thank you immensely for considering my request. Your support is incredibly important to me as I move on to this next phase of my academic career.

Warm regards,
